This week Eli Harold Jersey , the Lions travel to Chicago to take on the Bears in their first of two matchups in twelve days. For the last several years it has been a pretty one-sided affair, which gave way to the birth of the hashtag #WeOwnTheBears. This season may be different though. For the first time in a long time, the Bears are leading the division this late in the season, sitting at a record of 5-3. While most Bears fans will fight you on this, the fact of the matter is that they're doing so in spite of quarterback Mitchell Trubisky, not because of him. Even in the midst of their franchise's revival, he has been quite prone to dumb mistakes and seems to just falter for weeks at a time. If the Lions want a chance Sunday, they'll need to capitalize on that. Bold prediction of the week: Lions defense feasts as Mitchell Trubisky produces three turnovers on the day. With a strong ground attack and top-tier defense, the Bears simply need to not let their air attack be a liability in order to take care of business Sunday. The Lions

, on the other hand, are struggling through the air, on the ground, and on defense. They will need someone to step up if they want to continue to own the Bears. That someone is the defense. Unfortunately, the Lions don't play a lot of defensive football that forces the quarterback into errors. Most notably, Matt Patricia has deployed would-be pass rushers into contain schemes whenever facing a mobile quarterback, and that could be the case on Sunday as well. While that contain scheme forced folks like Aaron Rodgers and Russell Wilson to take sacks or throw the ball away, against a guy like Trubisky it could prompt a dumb decision that leads to a turnover. According to Pro Football Focus, Trubisky's accuracy percentage is 53.1 percent

, good for 25th in the league. Even better, however, is if the Lions don't get pressure, they still may get a chance at some passes as Trubisky has the 30th-best Clean-Pocket Grade at 66.8. At the end of the day, the Lions defense can't control whether Mitch Trubisky makes dumb decisions. What they can control is how uncomfortable they make him. If they can make him uncomfortable, then we may see him make lots of dumb decisions. The Lions will need that to happen if they want a chance in Sunday's ball game. One of the most common picks for the Lions lands with their rivals in Green Bay in our latest mock draft pick. "The Green Bay Packers have had themselves an interesting offseason. They've been uncharacteristically active during free agency, leading many to believe they have a general manager with the right head on his shoulders. However, last week's bombshell report of dysfunction between Aaron Rodgers, Mike McCarthy and Ted Thompson has put into question the foundation this team was built on. So it's SJJLionsFan609's job to help fix this rival of the Detroit Lions. In our Pride of Detroit Community Mock

, SJJLionsFan609 is the acting general manager for the Packers. And with the 12th overall pick in the community mock, the Packers have selected Iowa tight end T.J. Hockenson. Here's the explanation, courtesy of SJJLionsFan609. After spending big bucks on improving the defense in free agency, the Packers will be looking to the draft to shore up the holes in the offense. "I'll be honest, I didn't have the slightest idea what the Packers biggest needs were, but after doing some research it seemed tight end was at the top of the list with edge rusher, offensive line and safety also being big needs. I had Florida State EDGE Brian Burns written on the card and was halfway to the stage before changing my mind and going with Iowa tight end T.J. Hockenson. What led me to choosing Hockenson over fellow Iowa tight end Noah Fant was Hockenson's run blocking ability. Both Hawkeyes are superb in the passing game but as Joe Marino of thedraftnetwork.com stated, "One of the most tenacious blockers I've ever laid eyes on. The foot urgency and finishing skills are tremendous, will bury DE's and OLB's alike. Effective to collapse or wash down and ensure there's a soft edge for ball carriers." With new head coach Matt LaFleur bringing in his new offense

Nick Bellore Jersey

, I fully expect the Packers to try to run the ball a lot more than previous years. That is, of course, if Aaron Rodgers allows that to happen. Having Hockenson working the middle of the field will also help open up things on the outside for Davante Adams as well. 2013 was the last year the Packers had a top-10 rushing offense, and with the addition of Hockenson to LaFleur's offense, and a full season of Aaron Jones, I expect that to change this year."Catch up on all of the picks with our Community Mock Draft Tracker.
